How to remember your dreams

A practical guide to waking up to what your unconscious has been trying to tell you.

WHY YOU FORGET

Neither of this reasons is because you're a bad dreamer

REASON 01

How you wake up

We wake up to a really loud alarm which doesn't let us transition from sleep mode to full consciousness gradually. As soon as we wake up we start moving, checking our phones… Something else takes priority.

REASON 02

We simply don't care

We treat dreams as random, meaningless, and forgettable because they feel slippery and irrational once we wake up. Modern society often dismisses them as too subjective and inconsistent to take seriously.

BEFORE YOU SLEEP

TONIGHT & TOMORROW MORNING

The two rituals that change everything

Set the intention

As soon as you go to bed, repeat: “The first thing I will do when I wake up is remember my dream and write it down.” Intention spikes recall!

Change your alarm

Switch to a gentle tone that gets gradually louder. Create a slow transition back into consciousness to carry the dream with you.

WHEN YOU WAKE UP

THE GOLDEN RULE

Don’t move. Eyes closed.Don’t check your phone. Lie still. Ask yourself what did I dream. Let the images of your dream come to you.

Write or record whatever you have:

A scene, an image, just a feeling. Fragments are the entry point.

Give it a title

“If this dream had a title, what would it be? Titles reveal the emotional core and help you spot patterns over time.

Emotions Felt

Note the emotions experienced during the dream. Choose all that apply:

Confused	◯	Disoriented	◯	Relieved	◯
Scared or anxious	◯	Curious	◯	Frustrated or stuck	◯
Calm or peaceful	◯	Sad or heavy	◯	Powerful	◯
Excited or inspired	◯	Amused or entertained	◯	Loved or connected	◯

Dream-work

(Amplification / Association)

Pick one word from your dream. Write it in the center. Around it, list all words that come to mind. use all the space you need.
